Foreword

IN THE YEARS which have passed since the Museum of New Mexico's first Annual Exhibition of Painters and Sculptors of New Mexico—in the Palace of the Governors, 1914, before the building of the art gallery in 1917—most unusual development has marked New Mexico art. From an exhibit featuring Taos artists exclusively, this yearly display grew to include all the Southwest. Limitation of Art Gallery space has forced the Museum to confine the exhibition to New Mexico only. The number exhibiting—212 painters last year, 269 this year—speaks for the tremendous activity of the State in the arts.

This remarkable growth, though centered in Santa Fe, Taos, and Albuquerque, has, during the last decade, become a phenomenon touching every part of New Mexico. Many young artists have gained recognition since their first showing, and the number of talented new residents has increased considerably.

In all respects, the Fiesta Show follows time-honored traditions. From the first display in 1914, the Museum has avoided jury-picked paintings. The policies of the Museum, almost unique in the world of art, conform to the fluidity and the limitlessness of art as one of the works of man.

The premium now set upon space limits the number of entries to one for each exhibitor. The Hanging Committee, named elsewhere in this catalogue, has been given responsibility for location and arrangement of paintings and sculptures.
